

Cleaning for a Reason: Maid Brigade Donates Green Cleaning Services to Cancer Patients

Local Company committed to providing a healthy and clean home.

June 11, 2009

Maid Brigade has announced the company will give away a free house cleaning to four Tampa area cancer patients, and offer a fifty percent discount on cleaning services afterward for up to one year.

Having a clean house is very important for cancer patients for their physical as well as mental health, says Carrie Knight, owner of Maid Brigade of Tampa Bay. Cancer patients often have compromised immune systems and can be susceptible to disease, making a clean home necessary. Maid Brigade's exclusive green cleaning system eliminates the use of harsh, toxic chemicals that can cause pollution in your home and damage to the environment. The benefit of your home being cared for can relieve stress and aid recovery—especially when women are ill from chemotherapy or surgery and can't take care of their home and families as they used to.

“As soon as we heard about Cleaning for a Reason, we had to be involved,” Knight said. “We can really improve the lives of customers by doing what we do better than anyone else: providing them with the peace of mind that comes from having a clean home.” Maid Brigade pays its employees their regular salaries, as it would for a paying customer, because donating the services is a corporate gift, not an employee donation. This helps keep the gift confidential if the client desires-- even from the person cleaning the home. “Some customers don't even want my cleaners to know they are sick because they don't want sympathy,” she said. “We try to allow customers as much privacy as they need.”
